DECLARATION ON THE PREVENTION AND PUNISHMENT OF ABUSE AND HARASSMENT

Based on its values and in addition to legal and regulatory provisions, ESSF emphasizes the major importance of protecting all members and representatives of the association, including employees, members, officers, participants and volunteers. Everyone has the right to respect for their full (physical and psychological) integrity.

ESSF will not tolerate any act of incivility, violence, abuse, discrimination or harassment within the association or, more generally, in the course of its activities. The ESSF will treat any act of this type with the utmost severity, regardless of the consequences, whether or not it entails criminal sanctions.

CONFLICT OF INTEREST POLICY

Association's directors must always act in the best interests of the ESSF. They have the fiduciary responsibility to exercise their mandate within the association in the best of its interests and without their personal interests or those of third parties taking precedence over the interests of the ESSF. Association's directors must put their personal and professional interests, the interests of third parties and other interests after the needs and interests of the ESSF when exercising a mandate in the association.

A conflict of interest means any type of transaction or relationship that creates or may create a conflict between a director's obligations towards ESSF and that director's personal, professional or other interests.

All directors are required to disclose any actual and potential conflict of interest whenever a conflict arises or is likely to arise. A director facing a conflict of interest regarding a certain decision or transaction is not allowed to vote on that decision or transaction.

The intentional concealment by a director of an actual or potential conflict of interest is considered serious misconduct, regardless of any previous decision made in similar cases.
